The BIOFA Toy paints

were developed by engineers with kids, who love to play with wooden toys. They are very happy with the explosive colors and the natural ingredients. Kids are kids and either accidentally or purposely, have mixed all different colors together for wonderful new effects. Because the kids have sensitive noses, they made sure the paint has a neutral smell. Since kids are not particularly patient, they made sure the paint dries quickly. Since kids often play with toys in their mouths, they made sure that the paint was safe. Since kids make messes, they made sure that the paint was easy to clean with water.

BIOFA Toy Paint is made with a shellac base and has limited water resistance. To reduce color loss, we recommend that you seal the painted toys with the non-toxic and certified BIOFA products. BIOFA offers a variety of solvent-free, certified finishes that can seal the surface depending on your individual applications and requirements.

Where to use:

BIOFA Toy Paint is a paint for toys, not just a paint to play with. It is ideal for untreated wooden toys, but can also be applied to furniture, doors, railings, or paneling.
